1. Monitor your kids online accounts, activity & friends. You are the parent. Monitor your children's social media accounts, look for ways to meet their friends, their friends' parents and those they hang out with. Ask their friends or their friend's parents if you don't feel like you're getting the truth from your child. Be alert to boyfriends who are much older, or friendships that tend to isolate your child from other friends or family. Notice if your child has new clothing items, makeup products, cell phone or other items and inquire about how they acquired them. iParent.tv is one of our favorite resources for parents to learn about dangerous apps, social media and websites. We strongly recommend using parental controls and filtering programs such as the ones made available at the following websites:
